OHIO FROZEN SOLID.

From Cairo to Pittsburg There Is Ice-Queer Doings in the Middle of the River.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. Louisville, Ky., Jan. 18.—The river is still frozen solid from Cairo to Pittsburg. On account of the falls here this was the last point on the river to be closed by the ice. About a week ago an immense gorge of broken ice from above formed above the piers of the new Jeffersonville bridge, about a mile above the falls, and this was soon followed by a solid coating of ice over the whole surface of the river. The steamboats are safely ensconsed in the canal. where they lie tightly frozen in. Coal barges, containing half a million bushels of coal, are moored above the gorge. Neither boats nor barges are in danger now, but the gravest fears are felt that when the ice breaks up many of the river craft will be crushed. An immense mass of ice will then be turned loose in the current. The ice is nearly two feet thick, while on the gorge it is piled up twenty feet high. Pedestrians have used the ice as a highway between this city and Jeffersonville, Ind., for several days, and to-day and yesterday a number of sleighs and eyen loaded wagons and carts passed over ... Four saloons have been erected in the middle of the river and are doing a thriving business with the half-frozen passengers. Taking advantage of being beyond land jurisdiction "craps" and other gambling games are in full blast in the saloon shanties on the ice, and a prize-fight was billed for to-night in one of the dens in the middle of the river. Thousands of skaters have taken advantage of the unusual freeze, and carnivals are held nightly on the frozen river. It is warmer here this evening, but the ice is still firm and hard.

Doings of the Weather. Heavy snow-storms prevailed in the South yesterday.

The cold spell has caused water and fuel famines in several cities. At least half a dozen persons have been froz n to death in Maryland in the past week. Although the coldest weather in fifty years prevails in Delaware and it is six degrees below zero a peach-grower says the crop this year will be large.

In lower Canada the weather has been colder than ever known before. Rivers are frozen to the bottom, and numbers of people have been frozen to death in their

THE DEAD AT FREMONT.

Ex-President Hayes's Funeral to Be Held Friday-Sorrow in the City.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FREMONT, O., Jan. 18 .- The death of ex-President Hayes has caused great sorrow here, where he was known and loved by every man, woman and child. Flags are at half-mast, and almost every residence and business block displays emblems of mourning. The life of this distinguished man was one of much brightness and cheerfulness. His dispostion was such as to command immediate respect, and even up to the last he was ever bright and cheerful. His love for little children was very well known and they in turn reciprocated this affection. One of the first sentences uttered by his oldest grandson was, "Grandpa, I like you." His thoughts were ever to be of assistance to some one. The people of this place realize they have lost a friend. Not long ago, in talking with a reporter of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, the ex-President told many interesting things of his daily life, some of which show why the citizens of this place loved him. He said: "I rise with the sun both winter and summer, and seldom use the gas to dress by. This makes me very early in the days of the year, but in the winter I sometimes lie abed as late as 7 o'clock, though I usually try to get out by 6. I dress and come down to my library, and work from that time until breakfast. I do all of my disagreeable work before breakfast, and I solve my most knotty problems at that time. I think one's brain is clearer in the morning, and I find this to be my best working period. My correspondence 18 quite large, and it covers all sorts of subjects. I do all my work myself, and pen answers to all my letters with my own hand. At 8 o'clock I have break-

Another reason for international bimetallism is the necessity of fall of general prices, which is an unlimited curse to civilization, though low prices, when once established, are as good as high. There is great hope of the prevalence of the policy of bimetallism on the condition that by suspending the purchase of silver the United States force other nations, particularly Great Britain, to realize the gravity of the situation. Nothing was plainer to the American tion. Nothing was plainer to the American delegates to the conference than that we had been doing Europe's difficult fast, and shortly after this I go work again, and write away until work in this matter. We had been to great expense buoying the price of silver for their benefit, and have received no benefit about 11, when I drop my writing for the day. I then take a walk and look about the place. I have room for three or four of them at a time, and they expect for me to call for them without making any appointment, and I seldom lack for com-pany-in fact, the ladies outside my family ride with me more than those of the family. My daughter does not care much for driving, and she only goes about once a week."

FUNERAL TO BE HELD FRIDAY. Nothing more can be secured concerning the death-bed scene of the ex-President. The family are closely guarded in their conversation, and will not say more concerning it. They state that they do not wish any more notoriety than possible, and that they do not want anything more said about the death scene. The mansion to-day has been kept very quiet, the mem bers only occasionally coming down-town, and then remaining but a short time. The funeral arrangements have been placed in the hands of Col. H. S. Buck-land, of this city. Services will be held at the Hayes mansion on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. They will be very simple. The Rev. J. W. Bashford, of the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, will conduct the services, and it is probable that the local G. A. R. will take part in the ceremonies. General Hayes was born at Delaware, and Mrs. Hayes received a portion of her education by a special arrange-ment at the institution of which Dr. Bashford was the president. After the death of Mrs. Hayes the ex-President procured a simple family monument of Vermont granite. This monument contains a blank space for his own name, and in accordance with his oft-repeated wish, he will be placed by his wife's side. Handreds of messages of sympathy were received by the family to-day. Among them are telegrams of condolence from the President, all the living members of the Hayes Cabinet-William M. Evarts, John Sherman, Alexander Ramsey, Nathan Goff, R. W. Thompson, D. M. Key and Carl Schurz; ex-Governor Foraker, Secretary of the Treasury Foster, Mr. Wanamaker, from officers of societies and from old army friends. President Harrison wired the following, to-day, to Webb C. Hayes: Your favorable telegram of last evening left me unprepared for the sad news of your father's death, which came to me this morning. I very much regret that I shall not be able to manifest my high respect and personal affection for him and my profound sympathy with his family by attending the funeral. BENJ, HARRISON.

Grover Cleveland also sent a message from Lakewood, N. J., saying: "I desire to express my neartfelt sympathy with you and those who mourn with you in the household made desolate by the death of your beloved and honored father."

Private Secretary Halford telegraphed Hon. Thomas McSheehy, of this city, that four members of the Cabinet would be present to attend the funeral. The Loval Legion of Massachusetts telegraphed also. stating that they would be present and attend the funeral in a body. Hon. C. W. Fairbanks, of Indianapolis, sent a message, saving: "I feel the loss of a good friend in the death of your father; a better man never lived." A meeting of the citizens was held tonight, at which Col. H. S. Buckland, who has charge of the funeral arrangements. stated that in consideration of the large number of guests that would be in the city Friday it would be well to make arrangements suitable for their proper entertainment. He said that Governor McKinley bad decided to order in attendance at the funeral a regiment of infantry, a troop of cavalry and a battery, and that the pody would lie in state Friday morning. The City Council also held a meeting and adopted resolutions on the death of the

TRIBUTES TO THE DEAD. The President Issues an Official Order-Kind

Words from Ohio Statesmen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 .- Coming so soon after the sudden death of General Butler and the sad ending of Senator Kenna, the demise of ex-President Hayes caused a shock in official life here, and many incidents were recalled the last visit of the ex-President to Washington in September during the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. In the parade that was intended as a historic representation of the grand review of 1865 General Hayes and General Butler were the heroes of the spectators. They were cheered continuously along the line of march. General Butler rode in a carriage, but Mr. Hayes, despite his seventy years, walked briskly in the ranks. When the reviewing stand was reached Mr. Hayes saluted and walked on, but was called back, amid the cheers of the crowd, and given the place of honor beside Vice-president Morton, who represented President Harrison on the occasion. Flags were flying at half-mast on all public buildings in Washington. When President Harrison received the news of President Harrison received the news of his predecessor's death, this morning, he was much surprised, in view of the encouraging information received last night.

A special meeting of the Cabinet was held this afternoon, at which the following executive order was grafted and adopted: To the People of the United States: The death of Rutherford B. Hayes, who was President of the United States March 4, 1877, to March 4, 1881, at his home in Fremont, O., at 11 P. M., yesterday, is an event the announcement of which will be received with very general and very sincere sorrow. His public service extended over many years and over & wide range of official duty. He was a patriotic citizen, a lover of the flag and of our free institutions, an industrious and conscientious civil offitions, an industrious and conscientious civil officer, a soldier of dauntless courage, a loyal com rade and friend, a sympathetic and helpful neighbor, and the honored head of a happy Christian home. He has steadily grown in the public esteem, and the impartial historian will not fail to recognize the conscientiousness, the manliness and the courage that so thoroughly characterized his whole public career. As an expression of the public sorrow, it is or dered that the executive mansion and the several executive departments at Washington be draped in mourning and the flags thereon placed at half-staff for a period of thirty days, and that on the day of the funeral all public business in the departments be suspended, and the suitable military and naval honors, under the orders of the Secretaries of War and Navy, be rendered on that day. BENJAMIN HARRISON. By the President:

J. W. FOSTER, Secretary of State. The President expressed his regret that he would not be able to attend the funeral in person, but he desired to be represented by some of his official associates. It was thereupon determined that Secretary Charles Foster of the Treasury, Secretary Noble, Secretary Rusk and Postmaster-general Wanamaker should proceed to Fremont as representatives of the President. The War Department will be represented at the funeral services by General Breckenridge, Inspector-general; Col. Corbin and Colonel Ruggles, Assistant Ad-jutants-general, and Colonel Ludington, Assistant Quartermaster-general. The Navy Department designated Captain Howell and Commanders Dickens and Houston to represent it at the funeral. They left for Fremont to-night. The Attorney-general called the attention of the Supreme Court justices to the death of the ex-President, and they adjourned.

TRIBUTES FROM OHIOANS.

While the knowledge of ex-President Haves's serious illness had somewhat prepared the Senators and Representatives here for the sad news of his death, still it came with a shock to many of those who grounds here. Along later in the afternoon | had known him intimately and were hopeful of his ability to resist this last attack Senator Sherman was, perhaps, more inti mately associated with ex-President Hayes than any other Senator, and, as a member of his Cabinet, was officially associated with his administration. He was deeply moved, and, after the Senate had adjourned at his own motion, he said: "I knew him as well, perhaps, as any one man can know another. He was always fair and just to friend and foe, and sometimes failed to say 'no' when it would have been better for him to have done so, because of his disposition to oblige every one. The South should feel profoundly grateful to him, for with infinite courage he extended to the white men of that section an opportunity to reorganize their States at a time when they had been bitterly unjust to him. The death of ex-President Hayes comes to me like a sudden blow. I expected him to become my guest at the inauguration of the in-> ments for the future with confidence and cheerfulness. But I believe that he was as well prepared for death as human nature will permit any of us to be.' Senator Brice spoke very feelingly of Mr. Hayes, whom he knew well. "I will at the proper time," said he, "pay my tribute to the worth of Mr. Hayes as a man, a citizen, and a public official. As a Democrat I criticised with much hate and great feeling the conduct and course of affairs by which, in 1876 and 1877, he became President, but the warmth and kindness, the fairness and tenderness of the ex-President were such that I was never able to feel any sense of resentment against him individually. was, with his other Ohio friends, proud of his record, his bravery and ability as a soldier, his noble and faithful service as a member of Congress, his dignified, judicious and satisfactory handling of affairs as Governor of Ohio, and his temperate management of his administration as Presidentan administration which I can now see softened the asperities growing out of the civil war and led to the perfect blessings > coming President. He certainly had no expectation of death, and made arrange-which we are now enjoying." The death of ex-President Hayes was received quietly by members of the House. Time had mellowed the passions growing out of the fierce political contest which ended in Mr. Hayes's elevation to the presidency. The members of the Ohio delegation, nearly every one of whom was personally acquainted with the ex-President, spoke kindly of him. It was recalled by the Democratic members that they had never heard Mr. Hayes make a political speech since he left the White House.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS. Both the Senate and House adjourned today in respect to the memory of ex-President Hayes. In the Senate, as soon as the journal of yesterday was read, Mr. Sherman

Mr. President-It becomes my painful duty to announce to the Senate the death of Rutherford B. Hayes, at his residence in Fremont, O., last evening, at 11 o'clock. By the usage of the Senate, heretofore, when distinguished persons who have been President of the United States have died during the session of the Senate, that fact has been formally noted. Ex-President Hayes held high and important positions during his life, having been a member of Congress, a gal lant and distinguished Union soldier during the war, three times Governor of the State of Ohio, and President of the United States. He was a man of unblemished character, against whom no word of reproach could be uttered. Personally I knew him well, and I feel a personal sense of sorrow that he is taken from us. He was a man of great ability-greater than he sometimes displayed in his public actions-because he was always honest, always courteous and kind to every person who approached him, always gen-erous to friend and fee. He had no sympathy with hatred and malice. I therefore make the motion, which is usual on such occasions, that the Senate do now adjourn in respect to the memory of the deceased.

In the House Mr. Haynes, of Ohio, who represents the town and district in which ex-President Hayes formerly lived, and which he once represented on the floor of the House, announced in feeling language the intelligence of the death of the ex-President, and eulogized him as a citizen, a soldier and a statesman. Eulogistic speeches were also made by Mr. O'Neill, of Pennsylvania, who served with Mr. Hayes in the Thirty-ninth Congress; Messrs. J. D. Taylor, Enochs, Onthwaite, Curtis, Storer, Owen, Doan, Holman and Pattison. The Journal correspondent says: "Senator Sherman, in anticipation of Democratic opposition to the adjournment of the Senate on account of the death of ex-President Hayes, carefully studied the precedent for such adjournments of the Senate before he made the formal motion this morning. He found that the last adjourn-

President had occurred in 1884, when ex-President Fillmore passed away. To his President Fillmore passed away. To his own surprise, however, Senator Sherman found from the record that he himself had earnestly opposed the adjournment of the Senate upon that occasion. There was some bitter talk upon the part of extremely partisan Democrats from the South in both Senate and House about refusing to adjourn, upon the threadbare claim that General Hayes was not legally elected to the presidency. It required some expostulations by more sensible Democrats to prevent these violent sectional protests from becoming a matter of public record,"

Admired by McKinley. COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 18.-Governor Mo-Kinley said, to-day, in speaking of the ex-President's death: "It is in the nature of a personal bereavement. When a boy joined his regiment, was promoted to lieutenant, then to major, and went through the war with him. In 1876, when he was elected President. I was elected to Congress at the same time. I have a wonderful admiration for him both as a man and s oitizen."

THE TWENTY-THIRD OHIO. Something About General Hayes's Old Regiment-His Visits to Cleveland. CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 18. - A score of members of General Hayes's regimentthe Twenty-third Ohio-who live in this city, will be present at the funeral Friday. One company of the regiment was recruited in this city, and James P. Mcllrath was the first captain. The regiment was mustered into service June 11, 1861, with W. S. Rosecrans as colonel, Stanley Matthews lieutenant-colonel, and Rutherford B. Hayes major. Colonel Rosecrans was made a brigadier-general before they left camp, and E. P. Scammon, of Cincinnati, was appointed colonel. Later Matthews was made colonel of a new regiment and Hayes lieutenant-colonel of Twenty-third. In 1862 he was appointed colonel. He acted as brigade and division commander in the next two years, and in 1864 he was made general. The members of the regiment always held him in high esteem, and his death comes to them as a great loss. The members here have arranged for a floral tribute to be sent to Fremont. It is a wreath, and the circle is filled with a field of white flowers. In the white field there is a red star, the points of which touch the outer ends of the circle. The figures "23," the number of the regiment, are worked in the star with blue flowers. The star was the emblem of the brigade. It was known as the Red Star Brigade, Second Division, Army of West Virginia. On the points of the star are the letters "O. V. V. I" in blue flowers. The City Council decided, to-day, to attend the funeral of General Hayes in a body, and the city officials and many prominent citizens will probably attend also. The late ex-President was a familiar figure in Cleveland, coming to town very frequently to visit his son, Webb C. Haves, who is treasurer of the National Carbon Company, and who lives at No. 891 Prospect street. He was simple and unostentations in his habits, and it seemed strange to think that this genial old gentleman, who passed unnoticed in the street save by acquaintances, and who might easily have been taken for some well-to-do farmer, had ruled the greatest nation on earth for four years, and had been the equal of kings and emperors. His visits to Cleve-land were often of a business nature. He was a member of the Garfield monument commission, a member of the Western Reserve Historical Society, of the Loyal Legion and other associations. He was in Cleveland Saturday when attacked by the disease which resulted in his death. He had a host of friends in the city who were drawn to him not so much through admuration of his remarkable career as through love for the gracious spirit of the man. General Hayes's last public appearance in this city was at the banquet of the Kenyon Alumni Association, at the Stillman, on the evening of Dec. 26. He presided at the banquet and was elected president of the association. He made quite a long speech, and was in fine health and spirits.

Action of Legislatures. Resolutions of sympathy with the family of ex-President Hayes were adopted by the Ohio, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Connecticut and other legislatures yesterday. Organizations of which the ex-President was a member also passed resolutions of respect, and arranged for sending representatives to the funeral. General Hayes was a member of Ohio Commandery of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States from its organization. He was its first commander, and held the office four years, until he was succeeded by Gen. W. T. Sherman. The commandery will be represented at the funeral.

DEATHS FROM STARVATION.

Terrible Suffering of an Abandoned Wife and Two Children in Pennsylvania.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Jan. 18.-Word just received by the authorities of Haines Valley, in the lower end of this county, reveals a terrible destitution in the family of Benjamin Lear, in which two deaths have actually occurred from starvation. Two months ago Lear, who is an indolent, improvident man, abandoned his family, consisting of a wife and two children, the elder of whom was but nineteen months old. His wife, a young woman of weak intellect, was unable to provide for the children, nor did she bring their starving condition to the attention of the proper authorities. A month ago the elder child died of starvation, and in its dreadful suffering for food it had bitten deeply into the flesh on its hands and arms. Last week the baby of six months also died of want and starvation, and when a neighbor, who called, examined its body, it was found that the baby, in its desperation for nourishment, had sucked the flesh from the fingers on both hands until the bones were exposed. Kindly disposed neighbors are now attending to the wants of the abandoned wife.

Briggs's Prosecutors Rather Slow.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.-The Briggs proseenting committee considered to-day the question of an appeal from the recent vote of the New York Presbytery acquitting Dr. Briggs of the charge of heresy. The committee was unable to make up its mind in four hours, and will hold another meeting to-morrow afternoon. The committee will have to decide to-morrow whether or not will take an appeal, as the ten days al owed by church law for such action then expires. It is believed by many that the appeal will not be taken.

Chained Hi. Wife in a Deserted Barn, RADFORD, Va., Jan. 18 .- The wife of A. W. Fillie, who came here from Illinois recently, was found chained in a deserted parn near town Monday. Fillie had spread the story that the woman was insane and would soon be sent to an asylum. She proved to be perfectly sane. It is surmised that Fillie and the woman who posed as his housekeeper were trying to put the wife out of the way. Fillie is under arrest. and the jail is heavily guarded, as there is danger of lynching.

Weight of General Builer's Brain. Boston, Jan. 18 .- As has already been stated, the autopsy of General Butler shows that the brain was four ounces heavier than that of Daniel Webster. Dr. Cilley, the General's physician, made the autopsy. He refused to give the exact weight, whether it was sixty-two or sixty-eight ounces. Webster's brain was fifty-eight ounces, but it had been wasted by disease, and it was estimated that its weight was normally sixty-four ounces.

Kansas Populists Will Go Into Court-States ment from Governor Lewelling. Special to the Indianapolis Journal,

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 18 .- Governor Lewelling this afternoon prepared a statement covering the Legislature situation. He began by referring to what he termed the partisan reports that have been sent out relative to the organization of the House, He claimed that editorial comments have been made based on reports of an inflammatory and wholly unreliable character. designed purposely to deceive the people and create a public sentiment against the Populists. He also charges that massmeetings held throughout the State have been called through the intervention of corporate power. All the meetings, he asserts, have been addressed by corporation attorneys, who have purposely withheld facts of which they cannot be ignorant. He complains that no opportunity has been given the Populists to present their side of the case, and that they have been compelled to wait for the issuance of weekly papers to have their side presented to the public. He then proceeds to cite the facts relating to the dual organization of the House. He claims that certificates of election were issued to men who clearly had not received a majority of the votes cast, and against the law. Representatives were elected who were constitutionally ineligible to membership in the Legislature. Precedents established by the Indiana Senate in 1871, of the Alapama Legislature, and the United States House of Representatives in the Twentysixth Congress were cited to sustain the Populist position. The Governor insists that certificates of the canvassing board are not prima facie evidence of the right of the holders to participate in the organization of the House.

Details of the proceedings of the first day of the session are reviewed, and in summarizing them the Governor says: "Being personally satisfied that the Populist House had a majority of the legally elected Representatives, notwithstanding the possession of a majority of the certificates by the opposite party, I deemed it my duty to recognize it as the House of Representatives. The Senate is presumed to have been governed by like considerations. Such is a brief statement of the facts and the reasons which have governed the Populist members of the House and of the Senate. as well as the executive. Every step that has been taken is sustained by law and precedents. The Republican contingent has proceeded in defiance of law, contrary to every precedent, against the decisions of the courts and in defiance of the legally constituted authority of the State. If it were for a moment granted that their claims violated the law, still the authority competent to pass upon them have decided against them. Therefore it is their duty to submit to the decision, and if they be-lieve injustice has been done then appeal to the higher court -- the people of the State. Any other course places them in open rebeliion against the legally constituted authorities of the State and renders them liable to the penalties in such cases provided. It is my desire that there be no further complications growing out of this unfortunate affair. At the same time it is my duty to see that the authority of the State is respected by all citizens, and it must not longer be disregarded by those who are engaged in the illegal proceedings in the Notwithstanding the Governor's claim that the Populist House is the legal body the Populist members themselves have finally decided to submit the question of the legality of their organization to the Supreme Court. They now begin to see that the question will land there any way, and they are in a hurry to have it done with. To this end the Senate to-day passed and sent to the House the legislative appropriation bill. The House will pass it and the Governor will sign it. Then the Republicans will enjoin the Treasurer from making any payments under it on the ground that the bill was not passed by the legally constituted House. Thus the matter will finally get into court. The two Houses, still meeting on opposite sides of Representative hall, transact considerable routine business without interfering with each other, and late this afternoon adjourned until to-morrow morning.

TWO LOYAL DEMOCRATS.

Neither Senator Hill Nor Senator Murphy Will Oppose Cleveland's Administration. NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The following interview with Edward Murphy, jr., appears in

"Senator, would you mind telling the people what foundation there is for the story that you and Senator Hill propose to antagonize the coming administration?"

The smile went from Mr. Murphy's face as he said quickly and decisively: "Those who say that of me do not believe it. They do not believe what they say. They know to the contrary. My record shows what I will do. Who says Senator Hill and I intend to antagonize, in any way, a Democratic administration? Has he said so? Have I said so! Has a single word fallen from Senator Hill's lips or mine to that effect? Have Senator Hill's friends said it? From one end of the State to the other has there been found a man enjoying Senator Hill's personal confidence who has made such a prediction?" "But his enemies say so," began the re-

"Yes," continued Mr. Murphy, "his enemies say so. The men who bave sought to cripple him in every struggle for Democratic supremacy in this State pretend to tell the people what his plans are, but, remember, Senator Hill never speaks through the mouths of his enemies. Senator Hill never opposed anything Democratic in his life. He would not know how to do it. His training has not been in that direction. So far he has devoted the best years of his life to opposing Republican administrations. Oppose the administration! Why he helped to elect it. He did more than any other man in the country toward it, because he was in a position to do more. Have you forgotten the position of the canvass when he made the speech of all the great speeches of the campaign at Brooklyn? Can it have escaped your recollection how the Democratic prospect improved from that time! How it persuaded men to go to work as they never had before in their lives to keep it up until the victory was ours? Senator Hill understood and intended the effect of that speech as he did that of the masterly speeches which he delivered in this State wherever the State committee advised him
